The Daily Quote

"Last Thursday, a group of House Republicans filed into Majority Leader Eric Cantor's Capitol office suite and received a blank piece of paper labeled 'Agenda 2014.' The blank slate just about sums up where Republicans find themselves after a year marked by the first government shutdown in 17 years, futile efforts to repeal Obamacare and the inability to pass spending bills at the levels set by Republican leaders... It's abundantly clear that a new approach is needed. The 16-day government shutdown was a political disaster for Republicans and drove the party's poll numbers to new lows. With a dismal legislative record this year, Congress has a 9 percent approval rating. Most Americans vehemently disagree with shutting down the government and placing the nation on the brink of an unprecedented debt default... A Republican aide put it more bluntly. 'What we have done so far this year clearly hasn't worked,' said the GOP aide involved in the planning sessions. 'Cantor wants to take us in a new direction, which is good. The problem is we don't know where we are headed, and we don't know what we can sell to our members.'"
